Study Regulations for degree courses of the University of Applied Sciences

Agreed upon by the University Council of the University of Applied Sciences Kufstein, Tirol, and the University Board on October 30, 2013 effective as of October 30, 2013.
Last amended on October 17, 2018.

We are nationally and internationally acknowledged for our practice-oriented, innovative teaching. Our commitment is to play an active part in developing innovative research projects to improve the quality of life and the coexistence of people in a sustainable way, and thus contribute to new insights for business, society and science. Our approach is to develop young talent to meet the challenges of change and innovation, and to address major economic and social issues. Diversity in higher education is an opportunity not only to establish excellent interdisciplinary teaching and research, but also to improve the quality of our teaching. The integration of new forms of learning and teaching and the continuous development of our teaching staff is an essential objective of our institution.

University of Applied Sciences Kufstein, Tirol offers study and training courses in engineering, business and social sciences. The currently valid versions of the individual Study Regulations are available via the following link:
